Kannada Film Tackling the Stigma of Vitiligo

- A new Kannada film, directed by Mahesh Gowda, aims to challenge the stigma associated with vitiligo, a condition often misunderstood and stereotyped in India.
- Gowda, who himself has vitiligo, not only directs but also plays the lead role in the movie, continuing his trend of making films that highlight social issues.

What is Vitiligo?

- Definition: Vitiligo is a long-term skin disorder that causes the loss of pigmentation in patches, resulting in white spots on the skin.
- Cause: It occurs when melanocytes, the cells responsible for skin color, malfunction or are destroyed.
- Triggers: Possible causes include autoimmune responses, genetics, oxidative stress, or exposure to chemicals.
- Symptoms: Depigmented patches can develop anywhere on the body, including the skin, hair, and mouth lining.
- Prevalence: Vitiligo affects 0.5-2% of the global population, impacting people of all ethnicities, though it is more noticeable in individuals with darker skin.

Treatment Options

- While there is no permanent cure, treatments aim to manage symptoms and restore pigmentation.
- Options include topical corticosteroids, calcineurin inhibitors, phototherapy, and, in severe cases, surgical interventions like skin grafting or depigmentation therapy.
- Despite advancements, full and permanent repigmentation remains a challenge.

Social and Psychological Impact

- Emotional toll: Vitiligo often leads to deep emotional and psychological effects due to the visible nature of the condition. Many people face discrimination, social isolation, and mental health issues.
- Stigmatisation: The altered appearance of those with vitiligo can lead to societal rejection and misunderstandings, affecting self-esteem, relationships, and employment opportunities.
- Cultural misconceptions: In some cultures, vitiligo is falsely believed to be contagious, or is linked to poor hygiene, illness, or even divine punishment, further fueling social stigma.

Success Stories

• Notable figures: Despite these challenges, individuals like former Bengaluru Mayor B. Ramachandrappa have been successful in public life, showing that vitiligo does not define one's potential.

• Personal narratives: Upendra Prabhu, a stock market broker from Mangaluru, shares how he has lived a fulfilling life despite the condition, though he notes that avoiding face-to-face interactions has helped mitigate some social challenges.

Reducing Stigma

- Awareness efforts: Socio-medical workers have worked to educate the public, emphasizing that vitiligo is non-contagious and poses no threat to others.
- Changing perceptions: As public understanding grows and medical science dispels myths, there is hope for reducing the stigma. Increased awareness and shared experiences can empower patients and promote social acceptance.

Conclusion

 Vitiligo continues to pose significant challenges for those affected, both physically and emotionally. However, with growing awareness, medical advancements, and efforts to dispel myths, there is hope for a future where vitiligo is no longer seen through the lens of prejudice.
